IN A PANIC

The Greek Troops Fled From Larissa After a Short Skirmish—The Turks Captured Six Large Guns in the Fort, With Several Prisoners.

LONDON, April 27.—The correspondence of the Times at Larissa telegraphing from that point Sunday evening, says:

"The town was occupied by the Turkish cavalry at 6 o'clock Monday morning, after a short skirmish. The Greek troops fled in a panic, and most of the civilians abandoned their residences. Grumhoff Pasha, the inspector-general of artillery, Mustafa Matik Bey, the sultan's aid de camp, and Habib Bey and Sefullah Bey entered the town with the cavalry. The Turks captured six large guns in the fort and a mountain battery with several prisoners, among them officers and all the military stores. Edhem Pasha prohibited any pillaging and there have been neither massacres nor outrages, though some of the Greeks burned their houses. The dead are not numerous. The Turks maintain excellent discipline. The Greek army fled to the mountain sides. Many of the inhabitants are already returning.

"At this moment (p. m.) the Ottoman troops are entering the town in triumph, trumpets playing and banners waving. Mustafa Matik Bey has been constituted commander of the town. He has taken possession of the bank with the money it contains. The town will be held by a small garrison. Military operations in this quarter are for the time concluded. The cautious policy of Edhem Pasha is fully justified and he deserves every congratulation as a skillful and humane general."

LONDON, April 27.—The dispatches of the special correspondents for publication Tuesday consist for the most part of additional details of the Greeks' discomfiture. The Turkish plans are not yet revealed. There is no doubt now that Crown Prince Constantine ordered the bridges to be destroyed before the Greeks abandoned Larissa, but damage could not be done beyond what could be easily repaired by the Turks. It seems equally certain that the Greeks only escaped a crushing defeat with returning daylight by precipitate flight.

The news from Epirus is conflicting. It seems certain that the Turks have reconquered Pentepagadia, and it is not improbable that the Greeks have retreated to Arta, showing that the Turks allowed them to advance to Pentepagadia solely in order to destroy the column.

ATHENS, April 27.—The latest dispatches here show that the Greeks have occupied all the positions around Pentepagadia. Col. Maros has asked for reinforcements in order to insure his advance to Janina. Col. Dairaktaris has, therefore, started with 2,000 men to assist him. The report that Col. Maros has been ordered to retire is unfounded.

ATHENS, April 27.—Advices here from the correspondent of the Associated Press with the Turks at Larissa say that the quantity of military stores abandoned by the Greeks at Tyrnavos and other places prove that they did not retreat, but fled precipitately.

The Greek government has demanded of the directors of the Thessalian railroads that they continue the service of the Volo-Larissa railroad. If the directors refuse the government will occupy the line with troops.

THE CAPITAL.

Wm. R. Day Appointed Assistant Secretary of State—Bellaamy Storer, Minister Plenipotentiary to Belgium.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The president Monday sent the following nominations to the senate:

State—William R. Day, of Ohio, to be assistant secretary of state; Bellaamy Storer, of Ohio, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Belgium; George M. Fisk, of Ohio, second secretary of the embassy of the United States at Berlin, Germany; Huntington Wilson, of Illinois, to be second secretary of the legation of the United States at Tokyo, Japan.

Justice—Thomas R. Purnell, district judge for the eastern district of North Carolina; Edward G. Bradford, district judge for the district of Delaware.

Interior—Cassius M. Barnes, of Oklahoma, to be governor of Oklahoma territory; Frank G. Deekbach, register of the land office at Olympia, Wash.

To Be Receivers of Public Monies—John O. B. Seobey, at Olympia, Wash.; Porter Warner, at Rapid City, S. D.

To Be Agents for Indians—Asa C. Sharp, of Maryland, at Ponca Pawnee, etc., agency in Oklahoma; Thomas Richards, of North Dakota, at Fort Berthold agency, N. D.; Wm. H. Meyer, of Colorado, at South Ute agency in Colorado.

Treasury—Elmer J. Miller, surveyor of customs, port of Columbus, O.; Henry Brady, melter of the mint at Denver, Col.

Postmasters: James F. Steinbreck, Lake City, Col.; Frank E. Benjamin, Terre Haute, Ind.; Owen S. Higgins, Lebanon, O.; Henry Curran, Stevens Point, Wis.

The democratic members of the finance committee have not yet made a definite reply to the republican members concerning the proposition to bring the tariff bill directly into the senate before submitting it to the committee as a body, but a majority of the democrats have signified their opposition to such a plan and will insist upon a full committee consideration. It is believed that all democratic members of the committee will insist upon this plan.

The Monon Receiver's Report.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 27.—W. H. McDoel, receiver of the Monon, Monday morning filed with the United States clerk his report for the month of March. It shows that February 28 he had on hand $146,447.15, and that the receipts for the month were $508,424.59, making a total of $654,871.74. The total disbursements were $324,260.48, leaving a balance on hand of $130,511.46. Some time ago the receiver was authorized to borrow $200,000 for improvements and the report shows that $92,223.73 of that sum has been expended.

THREE SHIPS

With Cargoes, and Two Piers at Newport News, Burned.

Loss Will Aggregate Two Million Dollars—The Crew of the German Sailing Ship J. D. Bischoff Had a Very Narrow Escape From Cremation.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 28.—Fire broke out in the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Co.'s pier No. 5, at an early hour Tuesday morning, and before the flames were checked damage to the extent of two million dollars had been done.

Two of the company's immense piers were destroyed, three vessels burned to the water's edge, a tug boat entirely destroyed and eight persons injured, some of them seriously.

The flames were discovered in Pier 5 about 4:15 Tuesday morning, and spread with such rapidity that it was impossible to make any headway against them. A fierce north wind fanned the flames furiously and swept them across the docks to Pier 6, which was soon also burning furiously.

The British steamship Clintonia, which was loading with oil, tobacco and general merchandise at Pier 5 was soon ablaze. Tugs pulled her out into the middle of the river, where an ineffectual battle was waged at terrible odds against the flames that were raging in her inflammable cargo. She was burned to the water line at 10 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Norwegian steamship Solveig, which was loading grain at pier 5, next caught. The crew managed to escape by climbing down the hawsers to the pier.

Meanwhile the Chesapeake & Ohio tug Wanderer, which had caught fire, had burned to the water's edge. The German sailing ship, J. D. Bischoff, taking on staves from the north side of pier 6, also caught. The flames obtained such a hold on her that she could not be conquered, and she went to the bottom at 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The crew of this vessel had a very narrow escape from being cremated. They were aroused by John Anderson, one of the crew, and were only rescued with the greatest difficulty, after the captain and boatswain had been badly burned. The heavy north wind and the heroic efforts of the fire department saved the large grain elevator of the Chesapeake & Ohio Co. from destruction. The fire was rapidly spreading across the conveyors that connect the elevator with the piers, but with the aid of a locomotive and an immense chain the conveyors supports were pulled out, the conveyors themselves torn down, and this danger averted.

At 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the fire had spent its fury and was well under control.

There are vague rumors of many persons having lost their lives, but they cannot be traced to any reliable source.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Co. estimates their loss at about $300,000, which is fully covered by insurance.

The total loss including the three ships and their cargoes, the tug Wanderer and the merchandise in the piers will probably reach two million dollars.

The insurance on the piers is carried by a large insurance syndicate.

The steamship Clintonia was owned by Robinson & Sons, North Shields; the Solveig by C. Michelson & Sons, Bergen, and the J. D. Bischoff by J. J. Bischoff, Bremen.

Threats by Turnpike Mob.

RICHMOND, Ky., April 27.—The turnpike mob spirit in Garrard county seems to be worse than at any place in Kentucky. After demolishing many tollgates and making numerous threats, someone wrote a fiery letter to the Central Record at Lancaster, saying: "The people voted for free pikes, won them and should have them. I, myself, voted against free pikes, however. I am not in favor of a certain class using the pikes free and others having to pay. You need not be surprised if 800 or 900 men ride to Lancaster in daylight and instruct the court what disposition to make of the roads."

Beer Boycott Indorsed.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 28.—The Central Labor union, of this city, composed of representatives of all the subordinate unions, has indorsed a boycott of the Cincinnati Brewing Co., on the recommendation of the Hamilton (O.) Co-operative Trades council. The boycott was not indorsed until a lively meeting had been held at which it was said that there was a difference of opinion among members of the Hamilton union as to the advisability of the boycott.

Greece May Become a Republic.

ATHENS, April 28.—Popular feeling points to a revolution in favor of a republic. The citizens are greatly excited at the revelations made by former Minister Rallis as to the conduct of the campaign. Tuesday large meetings were held in Constitution square and other places and fiery harangues have been delivered by well-known orators in denunciation of "those who would betray Greece."

Four Persons Drowned.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 28.—An electric car was thrown from the track at the corner of East Morrison and Eighth streets Tuesday afternoon and plunged into a slough 25 feet below. Four persons were drowned and 15 injured.

May Be Deposited or Assassinated.

LONDON, April 28.—A dispatch received at one of the embassies here from Athens says that King George of Greece may be at any moment deposited or assassinated, and that the mob is likely to take possession of the city. The dispatch adds that the worst is feared.

Capt. Otto Paul, formerly of the Ohio national guard, is organizing a company in Dayton, O., to go to Greece. Seventy-five applications have been received. The many Greeks in that city are taking a lively interest in the project.

HON. W. J. DEBOE

Gains the Long-Deferred Honor of Being the First Republican Senator Elected in Kentucky.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 29.—William J. Deboe, republican, of Crittenden county, was Wednesday elected United States senator to succeed Joe Blackburn, democrat.

W. J. DEBOE.

The ending of the two years' fight to elect a senator was dramatic. At 11 o'clock politicians were crowding into the lobby of the old statehouse. The republicans marshaled their forces an hour before the joint assembly met at noon, and a steering committee kept careful eyes on every legislator. Women were scattered through the house of representatives.

Upon the roll call the democrats sat silent, only the republicans and half the gold democrats answering. Eighty-one responses assured a quorum and Deboe's election.

Deboe was then formerly placed in nomination by Nat Howard, republican leader, seconded by Senator Clark. As only 81 were present by the roll call 42 votes were all that were needed to secure the victory for the republicans. Deboe got 71 votes; Martin, the candidate of the gold democrats, 13, and Stone 1.

When Speaker Blanford, of the house, cast the ballot that landed Deboe men stood and cheered and women waved handkerchiefs.

A roll of the absentees was then called, and the Blackburn silver democrats responded 50 strong, their efforts to break the quorum having been useless. This brought the number present and voting to 135, making 68 necessary to a choice. Deboe had won by a margin of two votes, and Lieut. Gov. Worthington announced the result at 12:27 o'clock. The members yelled for ten minutes and then the joint session adjourned sine die.

Gov. Bradley has already written out a certificate of election for Hon. W. J. Deboe, of Crittenden county, as the junior senator from Kentucky to succeed Hon. J. C. S. Blackburn, whose term expired the 4th of March last, by limitation. Senator-elect Deboe will take this with him to his home Thursday and will be in his seat in the world's greatest deliberative body when it convenes on Monday next.

AN ICEBERG

Wrecks a French Brigantine on the Grand Banks—Only Four of the Crew Picked Up, Three in a Comatose State.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., April 29.—Anxiety is felt at St. Pierre as to the condition of the four survivors of the wrecked French brigantine Vallant, which struck an iceberg on the Grand Banks on the night of April 24 and foundered immediately. Three of them are in a comatose condition, and it is feared that one will not live through the night.

Their physical and mental sufferings are terrible. It was found necessary to amputate the arms and feet of three. Their ears and noses were shockingly frozen, and the flesh presents a ghastly and leprosy-like appearance. As if this were not wretchedness enough, their reason is temporarily, if not permanently, gone. As they lie in their cots they rave in distracted recollection of their awful experience.

It is scarcely possible to get any definite notion of the incidents of the disaster, but it seems from what can be snatched from their incoherent ravings that four dories were overturned at the moment of the wreck. Two of the men on board the rescued dory were taken from the water almost drowned. They were the first to perish. The third who died was a young fellow, about eighteen.

Four boats are known to have got away from the ship, but the captain's boat was the only one afterward seen by the occupants of the rescued dory. The intense cold made it almost impossible for them to do anything in the way of navigating the dory and they were compelled to drift helplessly.

The most horrifying incident of the experience was the cannibalism to which they were driven by the pangs of hunger. The dead body which they used for food was frozen so stiff that they were scarcely able to hack off the flesh with their knives. For two days the life of the survivors was sustained in this way.

Everything that is possible is being done to find the missing boats. Outgoing vessels will make a close search of the waters north and south of St. Johns, but there is little hope of further rescue.

Destructive Floods in Missouri.

ST. LOUIS, April 29.—Streams through Missouri are swollen by extremely heavy rains, and it is reported that a number of people have drowned. Stock has been drowned and growing crops destroyed. The break in the Hunt levee near Warsaw, Ill., will flood 30,000 acres. The situation in the neighboring Mississippi valley is grave.

Residence Burned.

HIGGINSVILLE, O., April 29.—G. A. Boehm's residence, two miles east of this place, burned Tuesday night. Loss $4,000; insurance, $2,000.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—SENATE.—The Nelson bankruptcy bill was passed Thursday afternoon. Mr. Allen (Neb.) offered the resolution providing that the chief executive express the sympathy of the American people to the government of Greece. Referred. The "free homestead" bill was made the unfinished business of the senate. A committee of 15 senators was named to participate in the Grant ceremonies. On the announcement of the death of Representative Holman, the senate adjourned as a mark of respect, the adjournment being until next Monday.

HOUSE.—The house Thursday adopted a special order for the consideration of the senate amendments of the Indian appropriation bill without reference to a committee. Mr. Bland of Missouri, protested vigorously against the course, but only had a following of 34, not enough to get a second vote. Mr. Simpson, of Kansas, is out of the city, therefore was not in evidence. The senate amendments of minor importance were concurred in except that removing the Indian supply depot from Chicago to Omaha. The amendment relative to the opening of the Uncompahgre reservation was not acted upon Thursday. While it was being debated the death of Judge Holman was announced and as a mark of respect the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—HOUSE.—The house Friday completed the consideration of the senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill and sent the bill to conference. The main contention, as on Thursday, centered about the senate proposition to open the Uncompahgre Indian reservation under the mineral land laws. Finally an amendment was recommended to the effect that no corporation should be allowed to obtain possession of these gilsonite deposits, but that government should lease the land in limited areas and for limited terms of years. The senate amendment striking from the house bill provision for the ratification of the oil and gases made by the council of the Seneca Indians last December, after a sharp debate, was disagreed to. Mr. Bland of Missouri, attempted early in the session to secure action on the resolution relative to the Union Pacific railroad mortgages which he tried to offer last week, but the speaker ruled that the resolution was not privileged. A resolution was adopted by which a committee of 25 was appointed to attend the dedication of the Grant tomb in New York on Tuesday and the house agreed to a programme of three days' adjournments for next week.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—SENATE.—The senate chamber had a deserted appearance when the session opened Monday, many of the senators having gone to New York to attend the Grant ceremonies. Mr. Harris, of Tennessee, was at his desk for the first time in many weeks, and was congratulated on his recovery from a serious illness. In the absence of the vice president and president pro tem, Mr. Frye, Mr. Nelson, of Minnesota, occupied the chair. Dr. Milburn's opening prayer made eloquent reference to the gathering of thousands to pay tribute to the great chief, Grant, and invoke that the glow of patriotism, freshly enkindled, may strengthen our nation, our government and the union of the states.

When the Indian bill was reported back from the house an effort was made to send it to conference, but Mr. Gorman objected, saying that it had been understood that no business whatever was to be transacted. Thereupon, at 12:05 p. m., on motion of Mr. Morrill the senate adjourned to Thursday.

HOUSE.—The house held a purely formal session Monday. Many of the members had gone to New York to attend the Grant exercises, and under the arrangement made last Friday, after the reading of the journal an adjournment was immediately taken until Thursday. The president's message transmitting the report of the Mexican boundary line commission was, however, received before adjournment. Mr. C. W. Stone (rep. Pa.), presided as speaker pro tem. There were less than 48 members present.

WORKING WOMEN'S

National Convention in Philadelphia—A Meeting of Uncommon Interest.

PHILADELPHIA, April 29.—Several hundred women, active in their respective localities, assembled here Wednesday to take part in the national convention of working women's societies. The chief object of the convention is the betterment of the condition of the working women, and the delegates directly represent clubs of working women and girls. Perhaps the most prominent organization represented is the Chicago Association of Young Women's clubs, composed of ten clubs of self-supporting women banded together for mutual help. It maintains a business woman's exchange and other enterprises of a business and money-earning nature. The convention, which opens Wednesday and continues until Friday night, will be addressed by Miss Grace Dodge, Mrs. Frederick Nathan and other women of prominence. Similar movements have been extremely successful on the other side of the water: the National Union of Working Women, which was organized about the middle of the seventies, having had at one time a membership of over twenty-five thousand.

FOUR DEAD.

In a Tenement Fire in New York Mothers Threw Children From a Window.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Four persons lost their lives in the flat-house, corner of Third avenue and Fifty-fourth street, Brooklyn, Wednesday morning.

The dead are: Mrs. Celia Barnett, 55 years old; Mrs. Carrie Newell, 38 years; John Newell, 5 years, and Lewis Newell, 3 years.

The two boys are children of Mrs. Newell, and were thrown from the fourth-story windows by the terror-stricken mother, and, although men below held blankets to catch them, their efforts were fruitless and the children were killed. The mother herself was found later by the firemen in the hallway burned beyond recognition.

After throwing her two children out of the window, it is supposed that the woman attempted to escape herself down the stairs, but owing to the dense volumes of smoke that filled the building, was overcome and suffocated. Mrs. Barnett, the other victim of the fire, was found burned to a crisp in the bed.

The flames started in the hallway on the first floor, and it is believed they were of incendiary origin.

A Statue to Cap Grant's Tomb.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Gen. Porter announces that provision has been made for a giant statue to cap the dome of Grant's tomb. The addition, it is said, will be designed by the Municipal Art Union. The statue may cost $15,000, and the association has $12,000 on hand.

MANY DROWNED.

Mighty Wave of Water Six Feet Deep and a Mile Wide Struck Guthrie, O. T., Crushing Houses and Driving People to the Tree Tops.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 29.—Fifty people are believed to have been drowned here Tuesday. At 6 o'clock Tuesday morning a mighty wave of water six feet deep and a mile wide swept down the Cottonwood valley.

The water struck the city with a mighty roar, crushing houses and driving people screaming from their homes.

At the first rush every bridge and every boat went.

All West Guthrie is 10 feet deep. The river is 30 feet above its ordinary level. The water is four feet deep on the railroad track and the track is giving away.

The telegraph is likely to fail at any moment. Hundreds of people are in trees, but they can not be helped. Men trying to swim the channel to reach four women and a babe in a tree were carried away. People are floating off on houses.

A woman wading from home with her babe on her head was seen to go under. The air is hideous with the screams of dying animals. There is absolutely no way of helping the people as there are no buildings and no boats.

Parties escaping from the flood estimate that fully 50 persons have been drowned. The property loss is untold. At 10 o'clock the flood was stationary. Two women and a child were carried away on a building. One man and two women, who were on a house roof when it went to pieces, perished.

It is absolutely impossible to get the names. Scores are missing, and many buildings are still going. A girl who was in a tree near the railway station for hours gave up and fell into the water. Hundreds of men are building boats at the lumber yards.

Gus Platt and George Willis swam through the main current, cut a flat boat from its moorings and saved seven persons, making a landing miles below the city. It is believed that many were caught in bed in small houses and were drowned.

The big Cigaroon bridge is gone, and immense damage done in the country. Skelton creek has washed away scores of farmhouses.

Cottonwood river cuts directly through the city of Guthrie, capital of Oklahoma, separating the colored section from the business part. Cottonwood is usually dry, but it has been known to rise several feet in a night's time.

The business section of Guthrie is situated on a knoll. The river is on the east side and the railroad tracks of the Santa Fe follow a gully on the west side, crossing the river half a mile south of the city. Most of the dwellings on the east side, occupied by Negroes, are one story and the slightest flood would carry them away. Guthrie has a population of about 8,000, one-third colored.

A Negro woman with a babe in her arms desperately tried to steady herself in a tree top, calling the while for help. She grew weak and the baby slipped into the water and was drowned. She was finally rescued and said her family of six had been lost.

A woman wading from home with her baby on her head was seen to go under, and a man swimming the channel to reach four women and a baby in a tree was carried down stream. Two women and a child were carried away on a bridge further down stream, and one man and two women, in plain sight of shore, were on a house roof when it went to pieces. They all perished.

Three men, Walter Olds, John Vandusen and Eugene Gilla sought to rescue an old man from a tree. Their raft struck an overhanging tree and they barely saved themselves by clambering into another tree. They were finally rescued on a rope sent to them by means of a shotgun and cord.

Two men secured a small stern-wheel pleasure boat and started to the rescue of half a dozen men and women lodged in a tree. The persons were rescued amid the cheers of the spectators. The cable holding the craft finally broke and it was carried down stream, but ultimately landed safely.

Adj. Gen. Jameson, of the territorial militia, narrowly escaped with his family. He was forced to wade and lead his horse with his family in the buggy.

John Metz, aged 55, was capsized while trying to save a woman, who sank before he reached her. Metz himself was barely rescued.

George Owens, Attorney Teague Ray and Dick Pearson were precipitated into the water while trying to save some people, and Owens was drowned.

The wife and five children of Wesley McGill, colored, were drowned in their home.

Wednesday night forty or fifty people could be seen clinging to trees and roofs of buildings, but could not be reached, and will have to spend the night where they are. The strength of many may fail them before morning. The fate of many others, who are known to have been carried down stream, will not be known until daybreak, and perhaps not then.

It is impossible to get any definite news from the hundreds of rescued people on the bluff west of the city. Those who escaped are rushing frantically about in search of missing ones. The river was going down rapidly Wednesday night.

A Kansas Cyclone.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., April 29.—A cyclone Wednesday morning swept through the country between Abilene and Salena, doing an enormous amount of damage. All the telegraph wires are down. It is feared that many lives were lost.

A Strong Point for the Winchester.

In time everything breaks or wears out. Ofttimes a break can be repaired if the proper means are at hand. One of the many great advantages of using a Winchester make of rifle or repeating shot gun is that, if any part of the gun is broken, it can be easily replaced at a trifling cost. All Winchester guns are made by a system of interchangeable parts so that a part will fit any Winchester gun of like model. This permits the owner of a Winchester to renew any part of the gun without the aid of a gunmaker. Parts can be obtained through any gun dealer in the country. This feature alone should recommend strongly guns made by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct. Send for their large illustrated catalogue free.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

What a Man Can Do With $1,000.

He can buy 160 acres of good land for $1,000. Pay $400 down; balance in three payments due in 3, 4 and 5 years at 7 per cent. He can also buy 100 choice ewes for $300 and ten good cows for $300. The milk and butter from the cows will pay all farm and family expenses. The increase of sheep and wool will pay off the mortgage before it is due. In five years he will have a farm all paid for and well stocked. For descriptive lists and prices address H. F. Hunter, Immigration Agent for South Dakota, 255 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

IMPOSING CEREMONIES

During the Dedication of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant's New Tomb.

A Myriad of Men and Many Banners Gathered at Riverside Park—Battleships of Every Nation Gathered in the Harbor and River to Do Homage.

NEW YORK, April 28.—When the sun rose over Manhattan on the day of days in her history of patriotic pageants, he found a cloudless dome awaiting him. The prayers of a million or more had been answered and storm seemed impossible. It was cool—almost cold—and the brightly tinted clouds held no promise of anger or sorrow. Briskly blew the northwest wind and joyfully it tossed the striped and starred bunting which from every vantage point in Greater New York gleamed in a beauty and a brilliancy no other flag on earth can hope to equal. Flags there were by the hundreds of thousands, from the huge emblem, with its 50 foot of fly and 50 foot of hoist, to the tiny emblem which decorated the collars of the truck horses. Flags in the great thoroughfares and in the narrow alleys; from tenement windows and on the staffs of public buildings; from the stalls of street vendors and the facades of mighty hostilities and loftier office buildings; from the spars of merchant ships and from the bows of the humblest of canal boats.

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

Long before the sun had risen above the eastern horizon the streets were thronged and earnest was given of the mighty hosts which later in the day would crowd the line of march and surge around the mausoleum of the great general.

The ceremonies proper began at sunrise, when the tall flag pole near the tomb was flying the immense American flag furnished by the daughters of the revolution. There it will fly night and day, in fair weather and foul, until the winds have worn it away and the suns have faded its colors. At the same time the marines on the warships were piped to quarters and landed on shore to stand and receive the head of the land column.

Bands were playing on land and water; children were singing and youths shouting in very joyousness of spirit, for it was agreed on all sides that the prevailing note should be joy over the memory of a great man honored; not sorrow over the death of a hero.

The Fifth Avenue hotel was the scene of hustle and excitement during the early morning. The broad corridors were filled with native and foreign dignitaries, and almost every second person blazed with bullion and military trappings.

In a side room were the members of the reception committee, who formed the escorts of the guests of the city. Among the earliest of these guests was Speaker Reed, who loomed like a veritable giant.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, was under the wing of Chauncey M. Depew, Gen. Schofield and Gen. Renger were together. Mr. Cleveland arrived at the hotel at 9:16 with Mr. Gilder. Troop "A" had already lined up on the west side of the park. Acting Inspector Allace with 105 men kept the roadway clear and only those with passes were permitted within the lines.

Secretary Long, of the navy, followed close on the ex-president's heels.

Loud shouts of the people announced the arrival of the president at 9:20. He rode in a carriage with Gen. Porter and Mayor Strong. His reception was flattering in the extreme and he bowed repeatedly. His usually grave face was wreathed in smiles. Vice President Hobart joined the president and Gen. Porter and the mayor, and the open barouche in which they were seated drew up in the center of the plaza, where it took its place at the head of the line. Gen. Butterfield, in his uniform of a retired general of the army, rode at the right of the barouche, which was preceded by a picked force of mounted policemen. The military escort included one sergeant and ten men of troop "A."

In the meantime the diplomats had departed by the 24th street entrance, leaving the way clear for the Grant family, the cabinet and others.

The Grants left the hotel by the Fifth Avenue entrance a few minutes ahead of the president's party. Mrs. Grant leaned on the arm of her son, Col. Fred D. Grant, and the others followed. Altogether they occupied eight carriages.

The initial step in the parade was made almost on schedule time, and by 9:40 o'clock the presidential procession was on the move.

The order of this procession was:

- 1 Squadron "A."
- 2 President McKinley, Vice President Hobart, Mayor Strong and Gen. Porter.
- 3 Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, Col. Frederick D. Grant, Mrs. Frederick D. Grant, Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris.
- 4 Mrs. Jessie Grant, Miss Nellie Grant, Master Chapman Grant.
- 5 Five carriages bearing the rest of the Grant family.
- 6 Ex-President Cleveland and Richard Watson Gilder.
- 7 Maj.-Gen. W. S. Rosecrans, Maj.-Gen. C. C. Augur, Maj.-Gen. H. G. Wright, Maj.-Gen. J. G. Parke.

Cheers greeted the distinguished party as it moved through the decorated streets, the enthusiasm being so noteworthy that President McKinley's face was joyous and his hat was in a state of constant salute.

Mrs. Grant and her family, to the third generation, were objects of especial attention, and the widow of the hero was visibly affected at the great popular demonstration.

The visitors got a chance to see a million people. The unbroken wall of humanity six miles long was an inspiring sight.

The arrival of the official portion of the procession at the tomb was the signal for a most stupendous outburst of patriotic cheering from the 50,000 people in the grand stands and on the lawns around the monument and on Claremont Heights.

The president and the other guests alighted from their carriages at the monument stands and took the places assigned to them in readiness for the oratorical and musical ceremonies at 10:36 o'clock, and stillness reigned in place of the noisy enthusiasm that marked the arrival of President McKinley.

The warships which lay at anchor in the river in sight of the tomb claimed the attention of the crowd before the arrival of the dignitaries and the commencement of the services of dedication. The river was dotted with small boats which were tossed about on the roughened waters and looked from the bluff like so many, bobbing corks. All was life and bustle aboard the men-of-war. The merchants' marine division was located in the lower bay.

At 5 o'clock orders flashed from the flagship for the fleet to dress for the day's festivities. A few moments later a rainbow of colors began going up from the bow of the New York. Immediately every vessel in the fleet followed suit.

The big ships made a magnificent showing in their gala attire, with rainbows of bunting from bow to stern. The naval grand division was under the command of Rear Admiral Francis H. Bunce, U. S. N.

At 11:04 o'clock President McKinley entered the speaker's stand and was followed by the others who were to participate in the ceremonies. The president, with bared head, was the first to enter the stand. He leaned on the arm of Mayor Strong, who kept his hat on. The president was loudly cheered as was also ex-President Cleveland, who appeared with ex-Secretary Tracy.

Mr. Cleveland and President McKinley shook hands with each other as soon as they met. The two then conversed for a moment. While waiting for the ceremonies on the stand to commence President McKinley, Vice President Hobart and ex-President Cleveland had their photographs taken in a group.

The order in which the various dignitaries took their seats in the stand was as follows:

President McKinley to the right of the speaker's platform, where he was soon joined by Speaker Thomas E. Reed, who remained in animated conversation with the chief magistrate for some time. Ex-President Cleveland and Mayor Strong conversed together to their left.

The first row immediately back of the platform was occupied by the Grant party, Col. Fred Grant being on the end escorting his mother.

Immediately back of the Grant family were seated the members of the president's family, including Mrs. McKinley, Mr. and Mrs. Abner McKinley and Miss Maud McKinley.

The third row was occupied by the ladies of the cabinet, many members of their families and friends in general.

The exercises commenced with the singing of "America." A solemn silence then fell on the dense crowd as the venerable Bishop John P. Newman invoked the blessing of Heaven on the ceremonies. Many of the people joined in the "Our Father," which concluded the bishop's prayer.

As soon as the prelate had taken his seat the hymn of thanks, "Old Netherlands Folk Song," was sung by the chorists.

Another mighty cheer arose when President McKinley, after the singing of the hymn, moved to the railing of the speaker's stand to deliver his address. He was introduced by Mayor Strong, who said:

"I now have the pleasure of introducing President McKinley to you, president of the United States."

As the president removed his hat cries came from all sides: "Put on your hat; we'll excuse you."

The president, however, stood with bared head, despite the nipping wind that swept across the exposed stand and delivered his address.

The vast crowd listened with keen attention to the president's words, and at intervals broke into cheers when some incident in the dead soldier's career was alluded to by the distinguished speaker. Even those who were too far removed from the speaker to hear a word seemed to be as much interested as those who were within earshot.

At the conclusion of the president's address Col. Fred Grant advanced and shook him warmly by the hand. The two men stood in the foreground of the wonderful picture, the spectators applauded. "The Star Spangled Banner" was played by the band, after which Horace Porter was introduced by the mayor. The orator of the day was accorded a warm reception. More discreet than the president, Gen. Porter kept his hat on while he was speaking. He read his address from typewritten manuscript.

At this point when Gen. Porter began to speak the biting wind forced many of the ladies in the presidential party to seek the shelter of the tomb. Among those were Mrs. McKinley, who was slightly indisposed. Gen. Porter was followed by Mayor Strong.

The "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," and the doxology were sung, and this concluded the ceremonies at the speaker's stand. The president and other officials and the distinguished guests then retired to the tent in the rear of the tomb, where an elaborate luncheon was served.

The president was escorted to the table by Mayor Strong, and Col. Grant escorted his mother, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant.

An interesting feature was the parade of the merchant marine, which was divided into four divisions.

F. G. Osborn was the rear admiral in command of the merchant marine on the flagship America. His command assembled in the upper bay, eastward of the center of the channel, on the Brooklyn side.

The first division was composed principally of tugs and lighters belonging to the New York Central and Erie railroads.

The second and third divisions were made up of tugs and steam lighters, with a couple of big ocean tugs in the lead.

GRANT MONUMENT.

The fourth division consisted of sidewheel steamboats, ferry boats and tugs.

Each division was divided into two squadrons, and there were about a hundred and fifty boats in line.

All the vessels were covered with bunting, flapping out as stiff as boards in the brisk wind, and presented a pretty and animated picture.

The hour set for them to start up the North river was 2 o'clock, but as early as noon they began to assemble at the rendezvous.

The black, wicked-looking torpedo boat Porter, sharply pointed against the white hulls of the U. S. squadron, rushed in and out of the naval lines, carrying orders, while the big patrol of the harbor police, with four steam launches as assistants, each newly painted for the occasion, scurried hither and thither on errands to the commanders of the merchant marine divisions.

The parade was started in splendid order and maintained excellent order throughout: the flotilla turning the stake boat anchored half a mile above the head of the warships in admirable style, and then stemmed the tide until all fell in, in quadruple columns, behind the monitors to await the coming of the president on the Dolphin.

The reception to the president and vice president at the Union League club Tuesday evening was a fitting culmination of the day's events. Preparations for the event had been made in the most lavish and extensive manner, and the exterior and interior of the commodious club house presented a brilliant scene.

More than 1,000 invitations had been issued, and fully half that number were accepted, judging from the large assemblage. The invited guests included the diplomatic corps, Bishops Potter and Newman, Archbishop Corrigan and a host of foreign and American dignitaries. The officers of the army and navy were also in attendance.

At midnight all was quiet. The warships' lights no longer were reflected by the placid Hudson, and the gray tomb on the eminence above stood out boldly against the black sky, at last a fitting monument erected by a grateful nation to the soldier president, who through victories and war brought peace and who, with peace, brought honor.

THE INCAPABLE WOMAN.

There is No Place for Her in This Day and Generation.

Nowhere outside of an old-fashioned romance is there a spot in the world where the incapable woman can to-day maintain a foothold. In the leisurely three-volume novel dear to our grandparents, Arabella and Araminta, gentle, pallid, timid, submissive creatures, flattered and gasped and fainted gracefully in their chairs at the slightest excuse for such behavior. To swoon with ease was regarded as a proof of elegance, and as a distinctive line marking the difference between the milkmaid and the lady born and bred. Possibly the tight lacing then in vogue aided the lady in her ability to perform this part of her role to the satisfaction of the spectators who were usually within the receding vision of the fainting and fragile being whose delicate nerves were proof against neither terrors by night nor shocks by day.

Frankly we doubt whether the old novelists were quite fair in their portrayal of the current life of their times. We find Jennie Deans able to undertake a long, difficult and every way arduous journey, reaching its end as fresh and hearty and full of purpose and courage as at the beginning, her beauty not marred by hardship and loss of rest. Mary, queen of Scots, was able to sit for hours in the saddle, no cavalier of her period riding harder or faster or more bravely than the bold and beautiful queen. The famous women who made the court of France splendid during successive changes and revolutions were not frail, die-away creatures of ghost-like hues and willowy outlines; they were substantial flesh and blood women, equal to all the dangers and perilous adventures which were often their portion.

Recalling the much harder conditions of housekeeping of the times of our grandmothers and of their mothers before them, we are impressed with the fact that the women who surmounted successfully so many obstacles must have been made of really tough fiber. The modern appliances which give us everything for our tables in highly condensed and beautiful forms, ready for use with the minimum of preparation, were then unknown. They pounded the pepper and pulverized the sugar and rolled the salt. So far from having electric lights to command at the touch of a mysterious knob, they had not even lucifer matches. The fire had to be kept in by strenuous care, and sometimes one went to her neighbors to borrow a handful of fire with which to light her own. Nothing was easy. Everything required hard, persevering and unremitting labor, so that we may believe that the women of that older day were far from being incapable.

Incapable women may for the brief season of youth, while the sea-shell color tints the rounded cheek and the beauty of health beams in the bright eyes, win a passing tribute from thoughtless men; but the women who wear well must know how to meet emergencies, how to order and see their orders obeyed, how to hold themselves in calm composure, whatever tempests are abroad. The incapable woman was never so much an anachronism as to-day.—N. Y. Ledger.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMIES.

How Living Expenses May Be Materially Lessened.

In reply to a subscriber who asks for some article on household economy we will give several papers, including economy in cooking, in making over old clothing and in the general use of the various articles that would otherwise accumulate in the house. Economy in cooking requires continual watchfulness of small matters. The individual who is compelled to reduce her living to the smallest means should save every particle of food or fat left from the meals. The fat of pork, beef, veal or chickens makes excellent frying fat. The fat of mutton, lamb or even of the turkey is too strong to use in cooking, but must be saved for soap fat. The question of what is fit for food when cooked again is one each person must decide for herself. Almost any vegetable left at dinner may be used for a salad. Meat may always be recooked or served cold with a salad dressing. Thin slices of cold meat eaten with mustard are acceptable if not put on the table too often, but cold meat is not so wholesome or digestible as hot meat. It is an art which every housekeeper ought to cultivate to cook meat so that it is as palatable and as delicious the second time as it was when it was first put on the table. Warm-over menses, improperly seasoned and generally flavorless, are not fit for food.

It is the duty of the economic housekeeper to keep an extra account of her expenditures and limit herself to a certain amount. She will be astonished sometimes at the delicious meals she can concoct from materials she once thought suitable for the portion assigned to the pig. This cannot be done without care. It is not economy to buy cheap, poor meat, or poor, stale vegetables. In this matter the best is the cheapest.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Coming Color.

It is a matter of comment that for the coming hot season red is to be so extensively used in millinery—brilliant scarlet, and not alone the deeper shades in Jacque rose, begonia, geranium, damask, claret and other tints that have been so popular. Even the mauve hats with gilded basket-work crowns and green straw tops are embellished with vivid lobelia blooms or gorgeous field poppies, whose uniform we all know, and trails of trumpet creeper and loops of cerise satin ribbon aid in the conspicuous decoration of the dreadful chapeaux of 1897. Many of the bright flower trimmings are treated agrette fashion, set up very high on the hat at the back, the leaves forming a topofity background against which a small conservatory of flowers nod and sway.—N. Y. Post.

RETURNED AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

The Lad Who Went to Seek a Fortune Returns to Sleepy Hollow on Foot.

"Could you tell me the road to Sleepy Hollow?" asked an old man whose shoes were white with dust, as he stopped at the junction of three roads near Andre Brook. In his right hand he carried a heavy staff, and panned to the lapel of his coat was a beautiful yellow rose. The old man had been walking along the Albany post road and had just passed the spot where the British spy was captured when he came to a bend in the road where the three roads meet. Fifty years ago it was but a junction for the road to Sing Sing and the road to Bedford. Now the town clerk's office stands there, and the town clerk, with the justices of the peace, who compose the board of canvassers, were there canvassing the vote on the local option question.

John A. Lant answered the question, and directed the old man toward Sleepy Hollow. The old man then inquired about a certain house on the Coutant farm. The two were soon engaged in conversation. The stranger was Jacob Minnerly, a member of a well-known revolutionary family by that name who lived at Sleepy Hollow years ago, before Irving gave that picturesque country its name. It was in a small house on the Coutant farm that he was born, 66 years ago. It was to see this house and the scenes of his early childhood that Minnerly had come.

More than half a century ago, longing for adventure he left home to seek his fortune. He sailed around the world, visited all its principal countries, but did not gather riches. Where he had spent his last few years he did not tell, Mr. Lant took him in his carriage, and as they drove down the old road Minnerly at once recognized Coutant hill and house, the old Jones homestead, where his grandmother, Mrs. Jones, lived; the Bill Carl house, the Furman house, and, lastly, the old schoolhouse, which he attended when Charles and Daniel Chamberlain were teachers. He visited the new schoolhouse recently erected by John D. Rockefeller, while the school was in session, and made a few interesting remarks to the scholars, touching upon the difference in the manner in which the present school is conducted compared with the one of half a century ago. After signing the school register he journeyed down Broadway to visit relatives in Tarrytown whom he had not seen since he left home. The house in which he was born is now falling to ruin. He climbed about the brush and vines which now almost conceal it from view.

"Who owns it now?" he asked.
"Mr. Rockefeller," was the answer.
"Who is he? I never heard of him."—N. Y. Sun.

THE CEDARS OF LEBANON.

Several Groups of the Famous Trees Are Still Standing.

Every girl and boy of the Christian world has heard and read, over and over again, of the "Cedars of Lebanon;" but very few have any idea of the locality and surroundings of the famous grove. It is a popular error, by the way, to suppose that there are no other cedars remaining besides this group at the head of the "Wady" (valley or canyon) Kadisha. There are, to my knowledge, ten other groves, some numbering thousands of trees. This particular group that we are about to visit is called by the Arabs by a name which means, "Cedars of the Lord." They number about 400 trees, among them a circle of gigantic fellows that are called by the natives "The Twelve Apostles," upon the strength of an old tradition that Jesus and His disciples having come to this spot and left their staves standing in the ground, these staves sprouted into cedar trees.

There is every reason to suppose that in the time of King Solomon these scattered groves were part of an enormous unbroken forest, extending the entire length of the Lebanon range of mountains, about 100 miles, running nearly parallel with the Mediterranean shore from a little below Beirut. The summits of the range are from 15 to 20 miles from the coast.

The Lebanon—that is, the "White"—does not derive its name from glittering snow peaks, but from the white limestone cliffs of its summits. The first biblical mention of the trees is in the Bible (2 Sam. v. 11): "And Hiram, king of Tyre, sent messengers to David, and cedar trees, and carpenters, and masons; and they built David an house."

From that day to this the people have been almost as reckless and wasteful of these noble giants of the mountains as our own people are of these cedars' first cousins, the redwood trees of the California coast range. As we approach the grove, which stands upon the top of a small hill, the foliage is almost black against the snow-covered crags of Dahle-Kidib which rears its highest peak over 10,000 feet above the sea.

There is a Maronite chapel in the grove, its patriarch claiming the sole right to the sacred trees; and, luckily, the superstition with which the trees have been surrounded has been their salvation. All the cedars of Lebanon would have been demolished for redwood years ago were not the people threatened with dire calamity should they take a single stick.—Harry Fern, in St. Nicholas.

—"How did you happen to insure in that particular company?" "I consulted the wishes of my wife." "Of course; that's very praiseworthy. But—does she know anything about fire insurance companies?" "Yes, she investigated, and found that this one always issues the prettiest calendars."—Tit-Bits.

PRESS AGENTS EVERYWHERE.

Value of Publicity Recognized by Other Than Theatrical People.

One of the most important outgrowths of the systematic methods by means of which the managers of large enterprises keep the public informed about matters in which they are interested is the press agent. Although most people believe that they know all about the functions of that officer, the business is really much more widespread than is generally known. The average man speaking of a press agent has the one who is connected with the theater in mind. He is the man who sends paragraphs to the theatrical editors, in which he not only gives the advance programmes, but works in, or endeavors to do so, all sorts of views about his particular actor or singer, or the company in which he may be interested. With many press agents who act in keeping with the policy of their employers the chief end is to keep the name before the public, and anything is resorted to, from a description of an elaborate gown or a stolen diamond to an imaginary runaway or an impending divorce suit. As a rule, the theatrical agent is a clever man, and to his good work the success of many an enterprise may be traced.

Other large advertisers were quick to recognize the worth of a press agent and the consequence is that newspaper men have found employment in that capacity recently in lines which are far removed from the "show business," but employ the same methods.

One of the first branches of business to employ a press agent was that of land booming. The large syndicates which were organized to develop certain tracts of land in the far west found that, although advertising brought them good returns, they needed something more by means of which their scenery and climate could be made popular. The press agent was the solution of the problem. The proper man was found and departed on his mission of education to the far-away places with men with bank accounts who were looking for new homes in pleasant places, and presently the country newspapers began to bristle with descriptions of farm lands in the domain of the press agent, unrivaled for productiveness and home sites, which, in point of climate and scenery, were absolutely perfect and so desirable that the reader was led to believe that every day spent away from the place was a day thrown away. The land-booming press agent has come to the east and is an important factor in the development of new summer resorts and residence annexes to large cities.

Another field for his usefulness was found by the press agent with railroad corporations. In one instance a railroad company had gained the ill will of many newspapers and criticism of its methods was a daily occurrence. The directors created the place of press agent and installed an experienced newspaper man with power to make investigations on any subject and instructions to make public such matters pertaining to the road as would counteract the previously circulated reports. A few months after he assumed control of the place the press agent said that the adverse criticism had ceased and that the newspapers had been won to the road's friendship.

"But that is not all," said a press agent who had served in that capacity for years. "Even society needs its press agents, and there are men in New York to-day who receive pay for keeping the names of men and women who are on the edge of society before the public. These people are partly in the swim themselves, but are not averse to earning an honest dollar, and they manage by hook or by crook to have Mr. Nobody and Miss Nobody mentioned in connection with society matters occasionally, and by that means stimulate their vanity and give them hope that some day they may be able to enter the sphere for which their press agent is preparing them."—N. Y. Tribune.

The Republicans Elect Their First U. S. Senator From Kentucky.

On the sixtieth ballot of the extra session, and the 113th since the senatorial contest began at the regular session in January, 1896, William J. Deboe was elected United States Senator from Kentucky at Wednesday's joint session of the Kentucky Legislature. The Republicans at last voted together and elected their nominee with three votes to spare, the final ballot resulting: Deboe 71, Blackburn 50, Martin 13, Stone 1. Mr. Deboe received the vote of every Republican member except himself, and including the votes of Norman and Baird, former gold Democrats. Senator Deboe will visit his home, in Crittenden county, before assuming his new duties. He will leave for Washington Tuesday.

Franklin Nominated.

A CONVENTION of the Fourteenth Judicial district, embracing the counties of Bourbon, Franklin, Scott and Woodford, to nominate a Democratic candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney, was held in Georgetown Wednesday afternoon. Robert Franklin was nominated by acclamation.

REPUBLICAN officials at Washington were much relieved by the election of a Senator from Kentucky. The Senate is now a tie, forty-four Republicans and forty-four opposition, but Senator Kyle will vote with the Republicans on the Tariff Bill, giving them forty-five votes.

News of The Legislature.

The bill deducting the pay from salaries of Circuit Judges and Commonwealth's Attorneys' to pay for tax judges was passed yesterday by the House. The House compared six bills previously passed and sent them by the Governor. The most important one was the $500,000 State bond bill. Representative Speed of Louisville introduced a bill in the House proposing a constitutional amendment submitting to the people the question of removing the State capitol. A resolution to adjourn until Monday was adopted. It is believed that the Legislature will adjourn sine die May 8th.

THE House Wednesday passed the bill limiting Magistrates and Police Judges to $2 a day for holding examining courts; the Senate bill to pay $35,000 back interest to the A. and M. College, and the County Funding Bill. Also a bill which requires employers of more than ten men to pay them in lawful money as often as every two weeks, and bill empowering corporations to combine banking and trust business in cities of less than 100,000 population, and the bill to abolish the Land Office.

A special says: "With no senatorial fight to attract the members, it will be difficult to keep a quorum of the Legislature at Frankfort. The resolution fixing May 8 as the day for sine die adjournment will probably be adopted by the Senate, but the action of the House is more doubtful."

The Kentucky Senate passed the Tax-rate Bill Tuesday after amending it so that the increase in the rate will be from 42½ to 47½ cents instead of 52½ cents. The Senate also passed the bill reducing to $135 the per capita allowance for members of inmates of the State asylums. The House passed the Mob Violence Bill with all the amendments that had been adopted by the Committee of the Whole. The bill as perfected makes the members of mobs individually liable for all damages for destruction of private property and also authorizes the governor to offer rewards of $500 and counties $200 for their apprehension and conviction.

Visitors From Fleming.

JUDGE BOOE and the Fiscal Court of Fleming County came to Paris Wednesday morning and spent the day examining Bourbon's free turnpikes and inquiring into the system of operating them. They visited the Peacock distillery vicinity to examine the rock crusher and the willipus-wallapus, and see a road recently built with this machinery. Judge Booe and the court were well satisfied with their visit.

Out of 176 miles of turnpike in Fleming toll is charged now on only twelve miles—at six gates. When the first gate was removed by raiders many turnpike owners went post haste to Flemingsburg and either gave their roads to the county or sold them for small sums.

In this county 251 out of 273 miles of turnpikes are free, and but seven out of forty toll-gates remain as a barrier to free travel.

The Fiscal Court of Scott county has instituted condemnation suits against twelve turnpike companies.

The toll-gate keepers on the Preston-Flemingsburg pike have been warned to stop toll collections. Since the action of Fleming county in buying the turnpikes the spirit of revolt against further payments has strongly taken hold in Bath county.

Three gates were removed by raiders this week in Rockcastle county.

In Mason Tuesday night two gates were destroyed. The gatekeepers protested, but were warned to stay in doors or they would be shot.

The toll gate raiders went to the Fitzgerald gate on the Maysville and Lexington pike one night recently for the purpose of destroying it, but Mr. Fitzgerald persuaded them not to do so. He out talked them.

The toll-gate on the Maysville & Lexington turnpike, known as the old Perry gate, near Oakland Mills, was cut down by raiders Wednesday night and no toll is being collected at that gate for the present.

Raiders burned a toll-house in Bath this week and other depredations are are nightly expected. The Fiscal Court has appropriated $500 to be used in stopping the destruction of the gates by mobs. The gates will be protected by armed guards.

The Fayette Fiscal Court this week paid $21,960 for 18 miles of the New-town, Bryant Station and Old Frankfort turnpikes, and made them free roads. Toll is yet charged on 180 of the 288 miles of turnpikes in Fayette, but negotiations are pending for the purchase of the roads.

50 lbs. of Coal

A day would keep your rooms warm in winter. But that small stove will burn only twenty-five. Hence, discomfort and misery.

A certain amount of fat, burned daily, would keep your body warm and healthy. But your digestion is bad, and you don't get it from ordinary fat-food. Hence you are chilly, you catch cold easily, you have coughs and shivers; while pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption finds you with no resistive power.

Do this. Burn better fuel. Use SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil. Appetite and digestive power will revive; and soon a warm coating of good flesh will protect the vital organs against the cold and the body against disease.

A Railroad Official's Experience.

MR. EDWARD EDMONDS, long connected with railroad construction in Nebraska, writes: "My heart troubled and pained me for 19 years. Shortness of breath was the constant and most common symptom. Intense, excruciating pain, generally followed any severe exertion. Faintness, hunger without any appetite; fluttering that made me clutch my breast, and palpitation that often staggered me as if I would fall, were frequent attacks. Again, everything would turn black if I arose from a stooping posture quickly. Sleepless nights with their prostrating unrest were numerous and I could get no rest day or night. I consulted leading physicians and tried advertised remedies. They gave me no relief. One of Dr. Miles' circulars described my case so exactly that I took Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and I am now a well man. I hope every one troubled with heart disease will try Dr. Miles' remedies. If they will write me personally, I will gladly give them full details of my experience." EDW. EDMONDS.

THE SUN WORSHIPER.

Raise the winder, Billie, let the air blow in a breeze,
I want to hear it whisper, an' I want to see the light
Climbin' down the mountain till it strikes the timber line,
Shinin' on the cactus an' the quakin' asp' an' pine.

When the snowy mountains poke their heads out of the dark
In the early mornin'—when there's shadows in the "park."
Seems to me the sunlight fallin' on the boulders speaks
Of a sorter somewhere layin' back beyond the peaks.

An' the clouds a-floatin' half way up, like fluffy things,
Kinder seems like angels just let out to try their wings—
When they stopped to listen where the canyon waters roar
Daylight come an' caught 'em an' they can't get back no more.

Ev'ry mornin', Billy, since you moved me over here,
I have lay'd an' waited for the daylight to appear;
Yes, an' ev'ry evenin' I have watched the growin' shade
Creepin' up the mountain when the day begun to fade.

I have watched it, pardner, when the gold was turned to red,
Flashin' up an' upward through the great blue, overhead;
I have watched the peak line turn into a flamin' track,
An' I've seen the pine trees growin' dim, an' an' dark an' black.

Billy, when I leave it, an' it won't be long, I know—
Never mind, old pardner, for we all have got to go—
Don't you let them put me down there underneath the hill,
Tunder in the canyon where it's dark, an' sad, an' still.

Take me up the mountain till you reach the very brow,
There, beyond the pine trees, where the clouds is floatin' now;
Where down in the mornin' from the east begins to break
An' the golden daylight will first touch the grave you'll make.

Where the sun will shine as it goes trav'lin' through the day,
Where the light will linger as it turns to go away,
An' the last faint glimmer at my restin' place will bide
As the sun in glory drifts down on the other side.

A MAN'S STORY.

BY ROMELIA L. CLAPP.

When sinners truly repent, I believe the first thing they do is to confess their sins.

Well, that is what I am going to do now.

I have often talked with my wife of the poetry and sentiment of the home, and have tried to impress upon her that it should be the abode of peace and harmony, and that she is the priestess who must keep the sacred fire ever burning upon its altar.

The duties which fall to her lot in our copartnership seem to me to be so light and easy that I have often wondered, and, indeed, have sometimes felt vexed that she should look so weary when I came home at night. I have always believed, and have often said it, that women have by far the better part of the bargain, with so little to do, and such opportunities for enjoyment.

Consequently I have been rather critical of what I have considered her lack of system in her way of managing her affairs, and have shown my annoyance at a spot on the tablecloth, an overdone beefsteak, a smudge on a tumbler, or at finding dust on the top shelf of the buffet. But Winnie is a cheerful little soul, and always makes the best of things, even if I am sometimes a little censorious.

But you are waiting to hear my experience, and what brought about my change of heart.

First, then, I must tell you that I am a clerk in a banking house, at a salary of $1,000 per annum, and that before Winnie and I were married we carefully counted the cost, but, calculate as we would, we could not make out that we could live on it and go in the set in which we had always moved, without practicing the strictest economy. But in the heyday of our bright hopes, we thought all things possible, and so we started in.

I will do Winnie the justice to say that she has bravely done her part, having always kept the household expenses within our income, and she made as very comfortable, often with very little money; but what has irked me is that she should have looked pale and weary, and apparently full of care, when, in my opinion, she has had so little comparatively to do.

We hired a modest flat when we were first married, and for two years we were able to keep an inexperienced servant at small wages, so that Winnie had an opportunity to learn by experience many of the ways of housekeeping and cooking. But, dear me! that was almost four years ago, and now we have Philip; and how proud we are of our little three years old son! I never could bring myself to think, much less to acknowledge, that Philip ever brought anything into the family but a wealth of joy and happiness. It seems almost sacrilegious to think that he is any trouble to us, and yet, since he came into it, he has slowly but undoubtedly revolutionized our household. Our lives, our characters, and our belongings bear marks of the energy of this little life which cannot be bottled up, and of the spirit which is ever rebelling against the limitations of a flat; for we still live in a flat. We have been obliged to dispense with the maid. We now hire a woman who comes in two mornings in a week, one morning to do the washing and the other to do the cleaning, and some cooking as well, such as a piece of corned beef, or a roast of beef, or a pair of chickens, which is a great help to Winnie, and makes possible little soups and made-dishes, which she has learned to make so tasty and toothsome.

Last night Winnie had a telegram from her mother, who was to come from Buffalo to take the steamer to-day at 12 o'clock for Europe (she had expected to come earlier and spend the night with us); and "could she not come down in the morning and visit with her on board, until the steamer sailed?" Of course she must go, and we were up bright and early this morning, and by seven o'clock we had had our breakfast, and Winnie had cleared the table, made the beds, dressed herself and Philip, and was off. Yet there was a weary look in her face when she kissed me good-by that irritated me. "Good-by, dear boy," she said, gayly. "When you go, just draw down the shades, and see that the water and the fire are all right, and after mother's gone, I'll be back and have everything as nice as a pin before you get home."

Before she could have got down the three flights of stairs to the front door (we have no elevator), some good (or was it an evil?) spirit shot a thought into my soul. "It is just seven o'clock," said I, as I stood in the lonely and not very orderly apartment. "What a fine chance to give Winnie an object lesson! I have talked a good deal, now I will demonstrate. I will prove to her that she consumes too much time and nervous force in doing her simple household duties. To be sure, I have greater physical strength than she has, but I will make all due allowance for that in my application. I can get away at nine o'clock, and by taking the Ninth avenue express train, I can get to the office on time, and in two hours what a transformation there will be!"

Winnie had left the breakfast dishes piled up in the kitchen, on top of the tubs near the sink. I would make short work with them. I had often, when the shades were pulled down and I thought nobody could see me, wiped the dishes for her, and it wouldn't be much work to wash them. But I would begin in the dining-room, for I meant to be thorough. So I swept the crumbs from under the table, and rearranged the things on the buffet; but dear me! how the time did fly, till I was obliged to finish off with a feather duster. I don't approve of feather dusters, they only flip the dust up in the air to come back again just where it was before. I have often said this to Winnie.

Then I looked into the bedrooms. How dusty the rugs were! I concluded to give them a good shaking. Just then, the front door bell rang, and I rushed into the kitchen to press the door opener, then back again to the rugs. "I ought to get them done before my visitor mounts the long stairs," said I, so I flung open the blinds and shook the rugs vigorously out into the air shaft, the wind blowing the dust directly back again into the room. At this juncture my opposite neighbor put her head out of her window, and called me to account for flaunting my dust in upon her. Our eyes met. I should never have known her to be the lady in silks and velvets I had seen on the street (Winnie always looks the lady, even at her work), and she seemed taken aback at seeing me with disheveled hair and my necktie under my left ear. We did not continue the conversation. I hastily shut down the window, and hurriedly brushed the dust from my clothes, so that I could decently open the door for the somebody who was ringing and ringing, so incessantly that I thought the elevated train had run off the track, and that Winnie and Philip were both killed.

It was a boy with a bundle. "Does Mrs. Gunning live here?" "No, you little rascal, and don't you ever ring my bell like that again!" I am afraid that I slammed the door and said things. But I couldn't stop to get mad, for the time was running along as if it had a thousand legs—7:45, and things looked worse than when I commenced—so I spread down the rugs and rushed to the kitchen, for I must wash the dishes.

I took down the dishpan and put some pearline in it, as I had often seen Winnie do; put in the cleanest dishes and turned on the hot water, but no hot water came; only air, with a scornful snort and a prolonged sputtering, then—nothing. "Now, what am I to do? Hello, janitor!" I shouted down the dumb waiter, "what's the matter with the hot water?" The reply came up, in the dulcet tones of the janitor's wife: "Just wait a bit, and it'll come all right, and don't ye be botherin' me." It moaned and sighed and snorted, but it didn't come, so in my desperation I turned on the cold water. It wasn't nice, but I pitched in and did my best.

"There, what's that?" said I. "Is that the front door bell again?" I opened the door from the kitchen and went on with my work; nobody came up, and the bell continued to ring, alternating with shrill whistlings. "That must be the postman. I suppose he has got a package too large to go into the box or a registered letter. I have no time to go downstairs." But there was no alternative; down I had to go.

"A letter, sir; one cent due."

I didn't trust myself to speak, but paid the cent and flew up the stairs again.

"Dear me," said I, as I began my task again, "what a lot of dishes for our little family! And yet I am always so particular about having a clean plate and spoon for everything. If I had this thing to do every morning I should soon become a gibbering idiot. Here are big plates and little plates, cups and saucers, bowls, platters and pitchers (how I hate to wipe pitchers), tumblers and spoons, knives and forks, and, worse than all, the frying pan, the oatmeal boiler and the coffee pot (and the coffee pot is worse than a pitcher)." I resolved over and over again never to use more than one plate at a meal; never to drink any more coffee, nor to eat anything which would leave a horrid pan to be washed. I made pretty good time, however, though I was not very proud of my work. The things didn't look as bright and clean as they ought to, and I could not stop to finish them all. I sincerely wished that I had never begun. In my frantic efforts to finish up I had turned the little kitchen into a sort of pandemonium. But time was flying, and I must get off.

Again the front doorbell rang. This time it was Mrs. Jones, to see Winnie. I should have thought, when she saw the glare in my eye, that she would have gone right downstairs again, but she didn't. She "wanted to get her breath," she said, so she stepped inside and leaned against the wall, and talked and talked, and kept me answering idiotic questions, as to how we all were, and whether Philip had got over his cold etc. I have often found fault with Winnie for not excusing herself from callers when she was busy, but I never will again, for I simply could not rebut Mrs. Jones, nor get rid of her until she was ready to go, unless I threw her downstairs. After she was gone I went out feeling quite exhausted and unhinged, and I concluded not to say anything this time to Winnie about the object lesson.

What her impressions were when she got home I shall probably never know. She couldn't tell me the cruel truth; but when I came home to-night and the house looked as peaceful and lovely as any home could, I felt like taking off my hat to her, for I realized, in some degree what she had to do to make it so.

I found out, little by little, how surprised she was to find the windows open, the shades up, the sun pouring in, and the flies walking over everything. Worst of all, I had not turned off the hot water. When it got ready to run, it ran filled up the sink and ran over, till, in the kitchen below, it began to make arabesques on the ceiling. Fortunately I had not fastened the door of the dumb-waiter, and the janitor's boy pulled himself up and turned the faucet before any great damage was done.

Winnie did not reproach me, but said that she appreciated my motive, and that it was "real sweet" of me to try so hard to help her.

To-night I am a regenerated man. Hereafter I shall feel that her part of the work is quite equal to mine. Besides, she has Philip, and that means an unending combat with compressed activity. In fact, I am free to say, from my small experience and large opportunities of observation, that not ever with my strength and athletic training, and my non-obtrusive garments, would I exchange. Never will I again undervalue woman's work, and while I live she shall have my sympathy and help.

I, however, hasten to write this to-night. I want my good resolutions to go on record while they are fresh and crisp. How I shall feel to-morrow, being rested, and having recovered my equanimity, I cannot tell. My impressions may not be so clear then as they are now, and I may have slipped back into my old way of thinking; for old prejudices are not always banished, nor are single principles changed by a single experience.—Woman's Journal.

ONE OF LINCOLN'S STORIES.

About Some Powder That Lincoln Misrepresented.

The following anecdote by Lincoln was told during Lincoln's visit to the front at City Point:

In the course of the conversation that evening he spoke of the improvement in arms and ammunition and of the new powder prepared for the 15-inch guns. He said he had never seen the latter article but he understood it differed very much from any other powder that had ever been used. I told him that I happened to have in my tent a specimen which had been sent to headquarters as a curiosity and I would bring it to him. When I returned with a grain of the powder about the size of a walnut he took it, turned it over in his hand and after examining it carefully said: "Well, it's rather larger than the powder we used to buy in my shooting days. It reminds me of what occurred once in a country meeting house in Sangamon county. You see, there were very few newspapers then and the country storekeepers had to resort to some other means of advertising their wares. If, for instance, the preacher happened to be late in coming to a prayer meeting or an evening of the shopkeepers would often put in the time while the people were waiting by notifying them of any new arrival of an attractive line of goods.

"One evening a man rose up and said: 'Brethren, let me take occasion to say, while we're-a-waitin', that I have just received a new lot of sportin' powder. The grains are so small you kin see 'em with the naked eye, and polished up so fine you kin stand up and comb yer hair in front of one o' them grainers just like it was a lookin' glass. Hope you'll come down to my store at the crossroads and examine that powder for yourselves.'

"When we had got about this far a rival powder merchant in the meeting, who had been boiling over with indignation at the amount of advertising the opposition powder was getting, jumped up and cried out: 'Brethren, I hope you'll not believe a single word Brother Jones has been sayin' about that powder. I've been down there and seen it for myself and I pledge you my word that the grains is bigger than the lumps in a coal pile; and any one of you, brethren, if you was in your future state, could put a bar'l' o' that powder on your shoulder and march square through the sulphurous flames surroundin' you without the least danger of an explosion.'—Gen. Horace Porter, in Century.

To Purify the Air. It is thought by many that the time is not far distant when fog and the smoke in the atmosphere of large cities will be dissipated by electricity. Already a patent has been taken out in Germany for an apparatus for smoke prevention by means of wires stretched inside a flue or chimney and rendered incandescent by an electric current. This simple method will consume the blackest smoke, but at present it is much too expensive for practical use.

THE DOGY.

A Queer But Lucky Little Beast That Is Well Known in Texas.

Probably not one boy in 1,000 east of the Mississippi or north of Texas knows in the least what a doggy is; but to the cowboy a plucky little doggy constitutes at the same time the pride and butt of life. It is nothing more or less than a little calf whose mother, having died when it was very young, is forced to eat grass long before nature intended that it should, or, as the cowboys say, to rustle for a living.

Now, do not confound Texas "rustle" with New York and Chicago "hustle," for they mean totally different things. In cowboy dialect, to rustle means to pick up a precarious living against the worst possible odds, and this is exactly what the doggy has to do. No comfortable little messes are made for it, nor is it transferred to a foster mother. It is just left to forage for itself, or to live or die according to its native hardihood. Of course, most of these poor, motherless animals die, and if one manages to live, in spite of fate, it is considered entitled to the most profound respect; for it means that it has pluck, stamina, strength, force—in short, that it can rustle.

It really means rather more than this. It also signifies that there has been an unusual combination of favoring circumstances; that tender young grass has existed somewhere in the region round about, and that the climate has been at least fairly mild. However, where doggies manage to bring themselves safely through childhood—or, perhaps I should say calfhood—they make the very finest sort of cattle. The amusing thing about it is, that their beginning to eat grass long before they should makes them, when young, tremendously fat, and gives them altogether a most curious appearance. Their little bodies being so stuffy and paddy makes their legs seem singularly short, while their hair grows very long. Then their struggle for existence seems to impart a very serious expression to their faces. Altogether their whole bearing is that of the most comical self-importance. You can tell one of them as far as you can see it, and their coming is usually greeted with shouts of laughter.

Herds of cattle always drift before a storm. In Texas, when a good "norther" comes up, they have been known to drift southward for miles and miles, the largest and sturdiest being always found in the front ranks. It is no uncommon sight to find, bringing up the rear, a number of these little doggies, bending their heads to the storm and trudging along as bravely and untiringly as their grown-up companions.

Cowboys consider it a very good omen to meet a little doggy that has strayed from its herd, and if several of them are together they dismount from their ponies, throw the grotesque little beast down and pick aside the long hairs to find out whether or not it is a maverick—an expression used for unbranded cattle, and if it is they cast lots for it, and the lucky one immediately heats his skillet or other instruments and brands it with his employers mark.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

HOTELS IN GREECE.

Single Rooms Are Rare and the Furnishings Are Painfully Seem.

In Greece the hotels of the interior follow one general type—the Italian. There is no common sitting-room. Why should there be? There is no office, but that does not seem to interfere with the presentation of bills. The ground floor is given up to a cafe or restaurant, if the innkeeper goes into that line of business. Very often, however, the master of the Apollo has only rooms to let. The sleeping apartments on the floor above are often approached by an outside stairway, and as is to be expected in a southern climate, they are scantily furnished. Overfurnishing is a vice anywhere. Under a southern sky it is a crime of which the Greeks are not guilty. There is usually a mirror, though that tribute to human vanity is sometimes lacking, and like the Turk, the solitary Turkish towel bears no brother near his throne. The bedstead is invariably of iron and does not offer the same vantage ground to the assailants of sleep as a wooden framework would do, but the cushions are there and the walls are there, so that small comfort is to be derived from that slight reduction of possibilities.

As in primitive United States with-in my memory, single rooms are rare. Two, three, four, five beds are put in one room or strung along the corridors. A fastidious person who desires to occupy a room alone has to pay for all the beds therein. In some places special charges are made for sleeping in the daytime, and there is a fixed rate for sleeping on the floor. That a man should wish to be private when he is asleep seems absurd. But in this whole domain we Americans, who submit to the abomination of the Pullman sleepers, have no right to find fault with any other nationality—we have no right to be fastidious about undressing in the eyes of the world, and a large charity ought to cover the diversities of different religions and different periods in this respect. In the good old times people used to go to bed utterly devoid of raiment, and the bedclothes, as we call them still, were the only clothes.—Atlantic.

THE PAGE COILED SPRING WOVEN WIRE FENCE.

MILLER & COLLINS, Agents, PARIS, KENTUCKY.

This is a smooth fence that will turn any kind of stock. It is made from the best hard steel drawn specially for the purpose.

HOW IT IS MADE. The large steel wires forming the horizontal bars are first coiled around a 3 inch rod, thus practically becoming COILED SPRINGS their entire length. These are securely tied together by 10 cross bars to the rod. The cross bars are best quality of annealed wire (galvanized), wrapped three times around each horizontal bar.

ITS ADVANTAGES. Being a SELF REGULATOR it is ALWAYS ready for business, slacks up for 30 below as cheerfully as it takes a new grip for 90 in the shade, gently, but firmly persuades a runaway team to reconsider its action. An unruly bull is safe as a canary in its cage; it saith unto the festive hog, "thou shalt thou go." The fierce wind and drifting snow pass by and it heeds them not. There is no terror in the locomotive spark. The trespasser is not led into temptation, and the rail stealer's "occupation is gone." The hired man and the lagging tramp, alike scorn it proffered shade. Like the model housewife, when well supported, it is always neat and tidy.

THREE POSTS TO THE 100 FEET. Economy is not our sole object in placing posts for farm fence at the unusual distance of 20 to 30 feet apart. Farmers say, "the closer the posts the better the fence." That may apply to common fences, but depending largely on its elasticity we PREFER the long panel. For cemeteries, lawns, yards, etc., they should of course be nearer, 12 to 20 feet is not objectionable.

We have completed (and are now building) a lot of this fence for Bourbon farmers and you can examine into its merits for yourself. Estimates cheerfully furnished. You may put up the posts and we will build the fence, or we will contract to do the whole job. If you are needing any fence, see us. We will save you money and still build you the best fence made. Respectfully, MILLER & COLLINS, PARIS, KY.

The Page Wire Fence in Bourbon.

MILLERSBURG, KY., May 4, '96. MESSRS. MILLER & COLLINS, Agents, Paris, Kentucky.

Gentlemen—I have had the Page Woven Wire Fence on my farm for about eighteen months and am well pleased with it. It has proved to be all that is claimed for it. It turns all kinds of stock and is as tight as it was the day it was put up and has stood some severe tests. A horse of one of my neighbors fell across the fence a few months ago and was not taken off for several hours but when taken off the fence went back to its place all right with the exception of a few staples. During the storm of April 24th a good-sized tree was blown across the fence and bent it down to the ground. As soon as the tree was cast off the fence went up all right and was as good as ever with the exception of one broken wire and a few staples out of place.

I am so well pleased with the fence that I am going to put up more of it right away. Respectfully, (5my-tf) WM. BECKHART.

CURCULIO SHEET.

Catching the Pest and Crushing It Is the Only Sure Cure.

All the spraying mixtures have been tried on plum trees to destroy the curculio, but with little success. Dusting with various mixtures and fumigating with smoke of hay, straw, rotten wood, corn cobs, tar compounds, etc., have served only as a temporary relief—driving them away it may be for a little time. It seems that catching the "little turk" and destroying him (or her) bodily is the only "sure cure."

To do this, take a sheet of any thin, cheap stuff—as cheese cloth—of suitable size, say three yards square; secure it over a frame of light slats made as indicated in the cut, Fig. 1. The three sides AAA, are full length; the other side has an opening to allow the device to be placed under the tree. To secure rigidity, add two slats as braces, shown at BB. Cords are secured to the outer slats at CC; passing back they unite at D, the purpose being to enable one person to handle the device readily by grasping the slat A with one hand and the united cords D with the other hand. The dotted lines D indicate the opening in the sheet which allows the same to be projected under the tree. The space between the dotted lines may be covered when the sheet is placed upon the ground by means of a flap.

Fig. 2 represents a wooden block, H, with springs attached in such manner as that it may be readily and securely attached to any part of the body of the tree to be jarred. The block H should be padded so as to prevent injury to the tree when it is struck with maul. The operator supplied with such an outfit as indicated may go rapidly over the plum orchard of cool mornings when the curculio are dormant. Jar them down upon the sheet and destroy them. —G. W. Waters, in Ohio Farmer.

THE CODLIN MOTH.

An Ounce of Prevention That Is Worth a Pound of Cure.

I do not profess that this cure or trap will catch all the moths, but a large percentage of them will be kept from laying on the fruit buds.

Take an ordinary barrel and fill it about three parts with water; hang any kind of a lantern right over the barrel by means of a piece of lath, allowing the bottom of the lantern to hang just inside the barrel and above the water. Choose still nights about the time the bloom is dropping. I say still nights because of a two-fold reason: Firstly, the moth does not fly on a windy night; secondly, it is hard to keep the light in the lantern if windy.

All night-flying insects or moths will fly to a light, and striking against the lantern fall into the water, when the mealy substance that is on the wings becomes sticky and they are therefore unable to rise again. In the morning a goodly number of these night marauders will be captured. I have seen as high as four quarts of moths taken from four barrels, which for all the trouble and expense is a very good return. If this be repeated for two or three nights there will be little or no use of spraying, although I have generally advised one spraying after. —J. R. Johnson, in American Gardening.

Convicts on Road Work.

The convict as a road maker has been the subject of some controversy, but on the whole it has been fairly well admitted that the one was the solution of the other. The warden at one of the New York state prisons, taking advantage of the enforced idleness on the part of many convicts, owing to a recently passed law stopping the sale of any, prison-made goods, used them on the roads of the village, with of course, but one result—good roads. Two bills are now on their way to become laws of that state, which will enable wardens to put convicts at work on the roads in the vicinity of two state prisons. With the object lessons which these examples will furnish it is to be hoped that the light of wisdom will shine over other legislatures.—Referee.

Beautiful Milk Pails.

The princess of Wales has received a present of two of the most beautiful milk pails ever made. They are of maple wood, with solid brass hoops and handles, and the lids bear a floral design painted by the Artist Muesill. One pail has upon it the Danish motto which, translated means "God for honor and righteousness," and the other the motto of Wales. Herr Holst, the venerable master cooper of Copenhagen, presented them to the princess a few days ago. They were made in 1872 for the great Copenhagen exhibition, and were originally intended as a silver wedding gift to King Christian IX. and now, singularly enough, have become the property of his eldest daughter.

SLAVE TO HIS COWS.

But His Slavery Brings In Many Dollars and Cents.

The other day a farmer said to me, says E. L. Vincent in National Stockman: "You are a slave to your cows." The conversation which called out this remark had developed the fact that I fed my cows three times a day, putting them in at noon for that purpose and letting them out again on pleasant days to drink at a well just by the barn.

Now, I was compelled to admit that it was some work to give my cows this attention. I know, also, that there are those who think it unnecessary to feed more than twice a day. But my experience is that it is better for my stock, at least, to give them a ration at noon. They expect it and are not contented without it, they certainly do well under this treatment. I never had a sick cow in the spring of the year, and my herd looks well and does well through the season.

A man whose cows always look as thin and gaunt as hounds in the spring looking at mine last year said: "No one could tell whether your cows had come into milk or not; they look plump after coming fresh. Mine never do." Of course feeding three times a day is only part of the care I give my cows in the winter time. I need not say that I try to keep them warm. This means that I do not leave them out on stormy or windy days. I do not intend that there should be any cracks in the floor or siding of my stable to let in the wintry winds. I try to feed liberally. By this I mean I give my cows what they will eat up clean, and no more. This requires study for each individual cow. I try to vary their diet so as to supply the needs of the cows to best advantage.

SOIL FOR RASPBERRIES.

Different Varieties Demand Entirely Different Ground.

As to soil for raspberries different varieties demand different soil in order to do their best. The red and white kinds require a deep, rich moist soil and one that is rather compact. Generally they do poorly on sandy soil, though in the extreme north they may show an exception to the rule. The black raspberry will do well in either light or heavy soil, but they will do best on soil that is light. In the selection of plants we will remember that no variety of the raspberry is other than biennial. That is to say, one year they produce wood, the next year fruit, and that is the end of them. We need not look, therefore, for two or three-year-old plants. It is best to get one-year-old plants for transplanting always. But while the wood is short lived the roots are long lived, often being several years old. Before planting the raspberry, in any way, thoroughly prepare the soil. In selecting plants get those with plenty of small fibrous roots, and set no deeper than they originally were. If the ground is poor manure in the hill, at the time of planting, and afterwards on the surface, working it with plow or cultivator. Keep the soil as level as possible, and free from weeds. The raspberry receives very little pruning. In field culture none is given, except to cut off the old wood after fruiting. I would often prove beneficial, however to prune more.—Western Plowman.

CALVES AT PASTURE.

They Need a Little Grain to Keep Them Growing Thriftily.

The calves at pasture ought to have daily a little grain to keep them growing thriftily. Their increased size in the fall will more than pay for the outlay and the trouble. The sketch shows a handy feed box. Put it on the inside of the pasture fence, so that the grain can be put in through the boards from the outside. Put slats on, as shown, far enough apart so that the calves can put their heads between them, but so near that the old stock, if in the pasture, cannot reach the box. The slats also support the box and hold it in place.—American Agriculturist.

DAIRY SUGGESTIONS.

It is less work to wash the butter-milk out of the butter than to work it out.

Milk the heifer clear up to within a week of her second calf if you can. This helps to develop a persistent milk.

There is no doubt that butter is a more remunerative product than cheese, in markets where it can be readily sold.

If the cow's teats are greased each time she is milked the warts will disappear. Large warts can be removed by keeping silk threads tied firmly around them.

W. F. Massey tells the Practical Farmer that while cottonseed meal may be an excellent feed for cattle, he does not want any feed to his milk cows if he is to eat the butter. He would prefer pea meal. If cottonseed meal be fed at all, it should be within small quantities and with ensilage or cut hay.

Butter That Sells Well.

There is an immense amount of butter sold every year that would have been salable if properly made. Although farmers have made butter for centuries, yet at the present day there are many of them who cannot put a good article on the market even with modern appliances to assist them. The creameries produce better butter than farmers because of having skill and experience in the business. The farmer need have no fear of competition if he knows how to make butter of superior quality.

CUNNING WILD TURKEYS.

Their Ways with the More Cunning Wildcat and the Less Cunning Hawk.

"It is curious how a wildcat gets the best of young wild turkeys," said a native of the Juniata valley, in the mountains overlooking which the wild turkey still finds secure covert and congenial environment. "The wild turkey is about as wary a thing as a wildcat, whether it is young or old, and the wildcat knows it. As soon as a brood of young turkeys are big enough and strong enough to be turned adrift by their mother to earn their own living the wildcat's mouth begins to water for them, and he brings his cunning in play to capture them. He needs his cunning, too, although they cannot fly yet, they can run faster than a deer and their habit of hiding themselves at the faintest suspicion of danger—and they are always on the sharp lookout for danger—is an invaluable asset that of the young grouse and quail. A wildcat stands but little chance of catching a young wild turkey by crouching on a limb and pouncing down upon it, as the suspicious fowl surveys its surroundings on every side and above and below, with every step it takes and every mouthful it eats. It has to be a more than wary beast that takes it by surprise.

"But the wildcat has tactics. Discovering a brood of young turkeys, he knows that there is no use trying to keep his proximity a secret, so he takes pains to let the turkeys see him stealing along in their rear. That hurries the flock onward, but the birds presently stop and look back to see if the enemy is still in pursuit. The wildcat keeps himself in sight, but always comes into view of the turkeys as sneaking out of a hiding place. He does this three or four times and then disappears in the forest. He has satisfied himself as to the exact direction the flock will keep and has left on their suspicious natures the impression that he is on their trail. Believing that the foe is creeping in the rear, the turkeys are alert in that direction particularly. The wildcat knows his business, and, making a circuit of the woods, he comes out far ahead of the turkeys right in the path they are feeding along and hides himself behind a log, a rock or any obstacle near which the turkeys will pass, still cautiously guarding their rear. The flock feed on their way. They reach the spot where their unsuspected foe is lying in wait. Suddenly there is a spring, a scuffle, a faint gobble and a scattering of the brood, and away bounds the wildcat with one of the number for his dinner.

"During the fallow period of the turkey hen's brood the mother turkey constantly watches for and instantly warns the chicks against another ruthless foe. This is the chicken hawk. It is wonderful how quickly the hen turkey detects the coming of the hawk. She discovers it nearly as soon as the hawk, in his soaring place among the clouds, has got his eye on her and her brood. While the hawk is dropping down upon them the old turkey utters a sharp and peculiar cry, and instantly every chick either scampers to a hiding place or falls over on the ground and simulates death as perfectly as the possum ever did. The preying chicken hawk will dine on nothing but what he captures alive and kills. How the young turkeys know that is more than anyone can say, but it is evident that they do know it. If they are true to their instinct and remain as they fall until the mother gives them the signal that all is well, the hawk, seeing nothing but dead game, as he supposes, will sail away again. The mother will not give the signal to her brood that all is well until the hawk is out of sight, and then at a cluck up will jump every chick. It sometimes happens that a chick is impatient and attempts to run things itself, coming to life before it gets the word from its mother. The chick that does so is lost, for the hovering hawk will have its talons on it almost instantly, although the chick has quickly obeyed a second order from its mother in the bushes and died again." —N. Y. Sun.

Saved by a Sleigh-Box.

From Wadena comes a story of a narrow escape from death on the part of a farmer and his family—who live two miles out of the town—during a snowstorm in January last. They attended church in Wadena on the night of the storm, and about nine o'clock started for home. As the road is straight and well sheltered most of the way, and as their horses had traveled it hundreds of times, they had no misgivings. They had proceeded but half way, however, when they discovered that they were lost, and instead of being on the road were driving round in a circle. They at once unhitched the horses from the sleigh, turned the box over, crept under it, and being well provided with robes and wraps, stayed there till daylight without freezing. The horses were found the next morning in a grove not far from the house, where they had been sheltered.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Injured and Insulted. "Talking about mean men," said Charley Slammington, out at the Colonial club the other night, "old man Rockingham surely stands at the head of his class."

"How's that?" asked one of the boys.

"You know, I've been there, off and on, to see Miss Henrietta. Well, night before last the old fellow set the dog on me, and I had a terrible tussle to save my life."

"Horrible!" exclaimed half a dozen of his hearers in chorus.

"But that," said Charley, "wasn't the worst of it. Next morning he sent me a note asking that I call around and settle for the wear and tear on the dog's teeth!"—Cleveland Leader.

Users and Selling Agents of Imperial Cash Registers Brought Into Court.

Toledo, O., April 27.—Suit has been filed in the United States Circuit Court here, against Hemmert Brothers, saloon-keepers at Celina, Ohio, by The National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio, asking for an injunction and damages. Messrs. Hemmert Brothers use an Imperial Cash Register, sometimes known as the Osborn, which is manufactured by the Osborn Cash Register Company, of Detroit, Michigan, and which The National Cash Register Company claims infringes cash register patents owned by them.

John M. Price, Nicholas Wagner and Berdan & Company, well-known merchants of this city, John Brown, a provision dealer at 202 Grand street, Brooklyn, New York, John Fritz, at 44 Main street, Ann Arbor, Michigan, and more than twenty other individuals and firms, who are either using or selling Imperial Cash Registers, have also been sued.

For the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

THERE is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause, which ever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where

Safe Cure has achieved its great reputation. It

ACTS DIRECTLY UPON THE KIDNEYS AND LIVER and by placing them in a healthy condition, drives disease and pain from the system.

Large bottle or new style smaller one, at your druggist. It cures 3 years of "rheumatism" in four continents. Warner's Safe Cure Co., London, Rochester, Frankfurt, Melbourne, Toronto.

No-To-Bac for Fifty Cents. Over 400,000 cured. Why not let No-To-Bac regulate or remove your desire for tobacco? Saves money, makes health and manhood. Cure guaranteed, 50c and $1.00, all druggists.

The young man who always tells what high wages he gets, need never expect a promotion.—Washington Democrat.

Look out! Shiver, then soreness and stiffness. Use St. Jacobs Oil—then a cure. —Athenian Globe.

Don't tell your friend of the silly things you hear; he hears enough for himself.—Athenian Globe.

Cascarets stimulate liver, kidneys and bowels. Never sicken, weaken or gripe, 10c.

If one of a man's relations visits at his house as long as a month, his wife never in the world gets over it.—Athenian Globe.

Misery and rheumatism are foes. St. Jacobs Oil and cure are friends. Try them.

When I Saw your advertisement. I thought that it was probably like the announcements of many other makers of harvesting machinery—big blow and little show; but I'm ready to surrender; go ahead, gentlemen, you're all right; I bought one of your binders last season and it is equal to any claim you ever made for it. This is the condensed essence of what Mr. Thomas Carney, of Washington Court House, Ohio, has to say about the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator Harvester and Binder. The claims made for McCormick Machines are strong claims. That's because. Machines are so constructed that strong claims for them are justified. The machine you want will cost you more than the other kind, for the simple reason that it is worth more; that's all—there's no other reason—and in the end you'll be glad you paid the difference, because there's nothing cheaper than the best. REASONS FOR USING Walter Baker & Co.'s Breakfast Cocoa. 1. Because it is absolutely pure. 2. Because it is not made by the so-called Dutch Process in which chemicals are used. 3. Because beans of the finest quality are used. 4. Because it is made by a method which preserves unimpaired the exquisite natural flavor and odor of the beans. 5. Because it is the most economical, costing less than one cent a cup. Be sure that you get the genuine article made by WALTER BAKER & CO. Ltd., Dorchester, Mass. Established 1780.

RECORD 218.

Sire of Coleridge 2:05½, Choral 2:08½, Arthur W. 2:11½, Claybourne 2:11½, Connor 2:12½, Cloine 2:13½, Cling 2:14½, Lee 2:15, and thirty-nine others in 2:30 list.

Sired by CALIBAN 394, Record 2:34.

(Sire of Cyclone 2:23½, the sire of Gillette 2:14½, Dr. Sparks 2:12½, Cicerone 2:12½, Cyclone Wilkes 2:14½, Cocoon 2:15, and sixteen others in 2:30.)

1 dam, Soprano (dam of Eminence 2:18½, Strathbridge 2:24½, Ambryon 2:19½, Supremacy 2:28½, grandam of Red Silk 2:10, Brown Silk 2:19½, the dam of China Silk 2:16½, and of Emeer 2:28½, etc.) by Strathmore 408 (sire of sixty-five and of the dams of over seventy from 2:09 to 2:30.)

2 dam, Abess (dam of Steinway 3:25½, Solo 2:38½, Currency 2:22, etc.) by Albion.

3 dam by Marshal Ney, son of Imp Emancipation.

CALIBAN 394, by Mambrino Pilot 29; dam, Cassia, by Cassius M. Clay, Jr., 22, etc. STRATHMORE 408, by Hambletonian 10; dam, Lady Waltemire (dam of Marshal Ney 2034) by North American; 2 dam by Hambletonian 2.

C. F. Clay is a horse of great finish and style, in fact as much so as any horse we know of. Is a beautiful mahogany bay, with black points, and stands 15½ hands high. His pedigree is full of the richest producing blood which has year after year added new and brilliant performers to the turf, for instance: Nannie Etticoat, out of his dam, has given in 1896 Red Silk 2:10 and Brown Silk 2:19½, the latter the dam of China Silk, two-year-old record 2:16½, beyond question the best two-year-old filly of 1896. As a two, three and five-year old, C. F. Clay was campaigned and landed many good races, securing his record of 2:18. His first crop of foals came in his six-year-old form and for several years afterward he was the leading sire, when age of foals was considered. His get all possess his grand individuality and are especially speedy; and as to race-horse qualities the performances of Coleridge 2:05½, Choral 2:08½, Connor 2:11½, Arthur W. 2:11½, and others are too recent and of too much merit to need any comment. But few better sires than C. F. Clay are now in the stud. His colts are not only trotters but are show horses as well, having probably been awarded as many premiums at the leading fairs as the get of any horse in Kentucky. C. F. Clay will make the season of 1897 at Emerald Park Stock Farm, 5½ miles north of Paris, at
